DECKER BROS. GARAGE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Explosion in Furnace Started Worst Blaze in Years.

PLACE LOSS AT $20,000

Decker Brothers garage on South Water street, near the "Big Spring," was entirely destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. Nothing in the building was saved excepting the office records. They were badly scorched and water-soaked so that it will be necessary to purchase new office equipment and a new book-keeping system. The loss is estimated by Jack Houck, garage manager, at $20,000, with $9,000 insurance.

The fire started about 8.45 o'clock and was caused by an explosion of gas in the furnace. The explosion scattered hot coals about the workshop and ignited oils, gasoline and fumes, spreading the flames so quickly that four mechanics in the shop had not time to save anything. One of the mechanics, Earl Houck, was slightly burned on one side of the face but no others were burned or injured. Mr. Decker, Mr. Houck and Miss McClure, the office clerk, were in the office. The safe had just been opened a short time before and the books and records placed on the desk. When the clouds of smoke rolled into the office, they hurried out so quickly that in the excitement the records were forgotten. While the office was at the south end of the structure and the work shop at the north end, the smoke filled the building so that it was impossible to get back into the office to get the records until the fire was pretty well extinguished. As the flames had spread to that part of the building before that time, the firemen had to use considerable water to get it under control and the records were water soaked.

Clouds of smoke mounted high into the air and over the Bellefonte Academy, giving an impression that it might also be in danger but the firemen—both Logan and Undines—kept the flames confined to the garage building. The Undine pumper was stationed north of the building, along the creek, and the Logan pumper near the water works pumping station, both drawing water from the stream from the "Big Spring." Each pumper had two good streams of water playing on the fire and there were several lines of hose attached to water plugs, so that an aggregate of more than 1,000 gallons of water per minutes was pumped over the building for more than an hour until the flames were well extinguished.

There were ten automobiles destroyed—a Chevrolet roadster, sport model, sedan and touring car in new models; five second-hand cars owned by Decker Brothers and a Chevrolet coupe, owned by "Red" Wagner, of Milesburg, who had left it at the garage when he drove to work at the Titan Metal Company plant on Sunday morning, so that one of the wheels could be replaced. The car of Jack Houck was at Lemont being painted. Over 100 new Chevrolet cars for spring and summer delivery were scattered about town in storage places. There were a lot of fenders and other accessories, including tires, destroyed.

The destruction of the garage makes it very inconvenient for the firm as their new garage at the corner of High and Spring streets is still in course of construction and it will require several months before it can be completed.

Great Entertainment.

A great feature entertainment has been engaged by the Moose for the local folks who enjoy good music. It is the famous Mooseheart Concert Company. The program has been presented in many theatres and comes here highly recommended. From the Hoboken, N. J. Observer, where theatre-goers and lovers of music are provided with the very best of entertainment, we quote the following praise: "The concert, a pot-pouri of popular selections of the past and present, was one of the best given here in years. Each member of the party showed his mastery of several instruments." The concert party from Mooseheart will appear in the German opera house here on Thursday, March 13th.

Fire on Bishop Street.

The Baum homestead on East Bishop street, now owned and occupied by Mrs. Mary Smith and her sons, Charles and John, was slightly damaged by fire on Sunday morning. The blaze was caused by a spark from a flue of the Hasg House apartments. Both fire companies responded and extinguished the blaze after a small hole had been burned in the roof. The loss was covered by insurance.

IN THE SOUTHLAND

Mrs. S. E. Satterfield, of Bellefonte, Writes of Trip.

In a letter to "The Republican," received last Friday, Mrs. S. E. Satterfield writes of her recent trip through the Southland and the letter is so interesting that it will be enjoyed by many of our readers. It was on December 23rd that Mrs. Satterfield and her friend, Mrs. Rebecca Stickler, departed on the trip. Mrs. Satterfield has traveled in many places and seems to appreciate that descriptions are always most interesting. From her letter, we quote as follows:

"We arrived at Thomasville, (Georgia), Dec. 25th. Mr. and Mrs. McGrew met us at the station and we were taken to their home. This place is called the "City of Roses." The population is 10,000. The chief industry is lumbering. There is a large ice cream factory and a city bakery. Other firms make turpentine, resin, cane syrup. Cotton, grain of different kinds, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, and cabbage are shipped away in carload lots. Pecans are their favored nut and are grown extensively here. Last year the crop was over 200,000 pounds, valued at $150,000. Some parts of Georgia are well covered with peach orchards and in season an abundance of this fruit is shipped away. There is a large chick hatchery that hatches 10,000 chicks per month. Here also is a large school for 150 girls called Vashti home. Land in this section can be bought at a reasonable price. When planted in pecans it is a very profitable investment.

There are 25 winter homes here, owned by millionaires and valued at $500 to $25,000 each.

Our next stop was in Florida. We left Thomasville on January 31st and stayed all night in Jacksonville, Fla. We passed through St. Augustine and Palm Beach. After traveling 500 miles we arrived in Miami, the city beautiful, on Feb. 1st. It was just what it was described as being—a beautiful city—29 kinds of palms, large cocoanut groves, mild climate with a temperature of 61 in winter and 75 in summer and a yearly average of only 6 days without sunshine. There are 62,000 inhabitants; 500 are colored folks. The latter have their own section of the city, with their own schools, churches, stores and other conveniences. They reside in the outer part of the city. Over 4,000 permits to build were issued last year. The city has a million dollar causeway, three and one-half miles long, across the bay to Biscayne. There is bathing in the bay the year round, The largest fish aquarium in the world is located here and all tourists should see it.

There are 75 hotels worth $20,000,000; 200 apartment houses, thousands of furnished bungalows and about 50 real estate offices. There is a Seminole Indian village, an alligator farm and the Everglades. I also saw the place where Mr. Deering lived. It cost $400,000 to build, it is said here. It is close to the bay. I passed by William Jennings Bryan's winter home and on another occasion I heard him lecture in the Baptist Temple to more than a thousand persons for two hours.

There are a number of parks here—one called the Cocanut Grove park where Pryor's band plays afternoons and evenings. Thousands come to it every day to hear the delightful music. The day on which the late President Wilson was buried, there were 10,000 persons in the park to attend the services. There is 18 square miles of land, 5,473 acres, in the city and nearby the river and the bay. There are 92 miles of paving, mostly asphalt. The valuation for taxes is $69,911,300. There are 400,000 autos in the state and 769 miles of splendid roads.

The Miami Herald publishes two daily papers, 32 pages full of the latest and most popular news. There are so many interesting things to be seen. I could not mention them all.

I met Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Macker, also Mr. and Mrs. William Smeltzer. They expect to return home soon. Mr. and Mrs. Smeltzer were over in Cuba and there was a terrible storm on their return trip. Otherwise, they were much pleased with the trip. I had a trip up the bay with Mrs. M. J. Griffith and her daughter, Carmen. The distance was ten miles to Cape Miami. It was lovely to hear the mocking birds singing early in the morning and to look out and see the sunshine, warm as summertime in the north. Poinsettias, hibiscus and all the summer flowers and trees were full of leaves. There were 140,000 tourists here this winter.

I have been from coast to coast but Miami is far beyond my description or any city I have ever seen. It must be seen to be appreciated. I met a lady on the train who had just come from Pablo Beach, that had seen fourteen of the whales spoken of in your paper last week. She said eight of the largest ones were supposed to weigh from 8 to 10 hundred and the other six from 6 to 8 hundred pounds. She said some of the tourists were taking teeth for curiosities and others cut out pieces of flesh to render for the oil. The oil oozed out of places where the skin had been cracked by the sun's rays. The whales were a dark brown and had been washed up on the beach during a terrific storm at sea. They could not get back to the ocean and were scattered all along the beach. Over 3,000 persons went to the beach to see the unusual sight. We are going from here to Philadelphia and New Jersey.

Would Run Behind $58,600.00 in 10 Years.

Figures submitted to Council, by secretary William T. Kelly, reveal the startling fact that the borough electric project would cost in ten years time, over and above receipts approximately $58,600.00. In other words, if these figures are anywhere near correct, as we assume them to be, Bellefonte Borough instead of saving money by such a deal will actually run behind $5,860.00 each year, for ten years, or a total deficit at the end of that period of $58,600.00

In short, the project would not mean a saving but a continuous, unavoidable deficit to the borough. And taxes, instead of being reduced, or held at the present rate, would not only go up, but remain up, for the next ten years, at least. With a positively fixed, unavoidable yearly deficit attached to the electric lighting project, any thought of escape from never-ending increased taxes would be hopeless.

We do not believe for a moment that the members of Council could seriously consider voting for any such financial burden to the taypayers. The Council include some exceptionably sound, experienced business men. We know that they would not, with eyes wide open, vote for an annual deficit for ten years for their individual business. It is unthinkable then that they would do so as guardians of the people's business. We refuse to believe that they will have anything further to do with the project, now that the comparative figures showing costs and income are before them.

Following is an estimate of expenditure and receipts of the water department for a period of 10 years based on figures for 1922 or 1923, including the expense and receipts in the proposed purchase of the "Gamble Mill" property, submitted to Council by Secretary Kelly:—

ANGELO GENUA ROBBED

Local Shoe Repair Shop Burglarized Sunday Night.

The shoe repair shop of Angelo Genua, in the Bush Arcade building, was burglarized on Sunday night or early Monday morning. Cash amounting to about $150 was stolen, besides a quantity of cigars, cigarettes, and a few other articles. The matter was reported to Sheriff Dick Taylor on Monday morning, a short time after Genua made the discovery and is being investigated. It is thought to be the work of some one or more persons who were familiar with the place of business.

Genua was in his shop on Sunday evening as was his custom. He left the place, he said, about 9 o'clock. When he returned on Monday morning he found things topsy-turvy. An investigation revealed that entrance had been gained by smashing out a window and going through the cellar, ascending a flight of steps to the store room. The money included gold and some other cash, which was kept in a box. All of it was taken.

Took Lad to Huntingdon.

Edward McCullough, who was sent from here to Glen Mills school near Philadelphia, because of his frequent shortcomings and mischievous pranks, one of the most cruel of which was riding a horse too far and too fast on a hot day, was taken to Huntingdon to be placed in the Reformatory there on Tuesday morning by Sheriff Dick Taylor. McCullough had escaped from the Glen Mills school last summer and was making his home on farms at Rock, spending most of his time at the John White home. He is 18 years old and seems not to have any close relatives. He was found at the John White home last week by John Garis.

Postmaster Examination.

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination to be held at Bellefonte on March 22nd as a result of which it is expected to fill a contemplated vacancy of postmaster at Pleasant Gap. The compensation of the postmaster at this office was $588 for last year.

BANK CASE STATUS

Conflicting Views as to Effect of J. M. Shugert's Death.

There is an apparent conflict of opinion among opposing lawyers in the Centre County Bank case as to the probable effect of John M. Shugert's death upon proceedings now before the United States Supreme Court. Argument before that Court is scheduled for Tuesday, March 11th.

In the opinion of counsel for the petitioners in bankruptcy, of whom the late Mr. Shugert was one, the entire procedure is not affected one way or another by his death, and the hearing scheduled for next Tuesday will go on just as if Mr. Shugert were living. This contention is based on the declaration that Mr. Shugert's estate is in bankruptcy, and that under the laws relating to bankruptcy the death of such petitioner does not serve to stop legal procedure already instituted. It is their further contention that while Mr. Shugert had not been formally declared a bankrupt, he had been served with a subpena, following the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, and that under federal court rulings this fact clearly established him to be a bankrupt within the meaning of the bankruptcy laws. They added that, in their judgment, disposal of Mr. Shugert's estate will therefore not revert to the Centre County courts.

It is understood that some of opposing counsel hold to the belief that Mr. Shugert's death automatically nullifies the various proceedings heretofore taken and now in course of determination, and that an administrator will have to be appointed to adjust his estate in the Centre County courts. If this contention is well founded, it necessarily follows that there will be indefinite delay in winding up the badly muddied affairs of the bank.

Meanwhile, the paper books have been prepared and are in readiness for the hearing at Washington next Tuesday, should the hearing be held as scheduled.

Capt. Fry Under Knife.

Capt. W. H. Fry, veterinarian, veteran and one of the most widely known and highly esteemed residents of Centre County, who has been a patient in the Bellefonte hospital for some time, underwent a serious operation on Wednesday morning. This morning his condition was reported as fine and it is hoped that the operation will be entirely successful.

Freight Wreck.

Train service was delayed oeer the Tyrone Division on Monday on account of two cars of an eastbound freight train being wrecked at Beech Creek station. The wreck was caused by the brake beam on one of the cars dropping to the track as the train was moving. One end of the beam caught in the ties and tore up a switch. Two cars were derailed. No one was injured and the Lock Haven wrecking crew was soon on the scene and made repairs. The Lehigh express was re-routed via Lewisburg, making the train due in Bellefonte at 3:08 over two hours late. The train which left here at 1:30 got as far as Milesburg when orders were received for it to return to Bellefonte and go round via Lewisburg. A number of students who had been visiting their homes in Snow Shoe were not able to make train connections on account of the delay caused and were late in returning to their schools in Chambersburg and also at Cresson.

Court on Friday.

Judge Henry G. Quigley will preside at a session of court on Friday when a number of desertion and non-support and surety of the peace cases will be heard. Court is scheduled to start at 10 a. m.

NO DECISION ON MILL PROJECT BY COUNCIL

Will Wait for Lower Rates From Keystone Power Corporation

COMPLICATION FEARED

The expected decision on the Ulsh & Bashoar mill proposition at the meeting of Council on Monday evening was not forthcoming. The Keystone Power Corporation estimate for rates for power and lighting of the streets was not submitted as had been anticipated, it being claimed that more time was needed to consider the matter. A report was made that the company expects experts here this week and the situation will be gone over carefully and a reduction in rates will be made. A new meter was installed at the pumping station to get accurately the amount of current used in pumping.

W. T. Kelly, secretary, and J. M. Cunningham, of the water committee, submitted reports prepared from the borough statements of 1922 and 1923 to show just what the borough had paid to the Keystone Power Corporrtion for power and light. Figures from these reports were compared with the figures in the possession of Council giving estimated cost of the mill project.

A letter from A. L. Mayer of Roopsburg, was read, in which Mr. Mayer stated that he was ready to sign a five year contract to lease the mill at $2,000 per year, with an option to renew the contract at the end of that period for another five years.

The members of Council seemed to realize that the proposition was a serious one and that no action should be taken until they were fully satisfied that no mistake was being made. With the estimates and reports available, it was thought best to delay definite action until next Monday evening, pending the filing of a new schedule of rates for the borough by the Keystone Power Corporation.

Other routine matters were considered by Council, reports being made by the street, water, finance, fire and police, and special committees. The water committee included collections of $22 on the 1922 water tax duplicate and the finance committee reported notes with a total of $28,620 for renewal and payment of interest.

Bonds of $500 each for borough manager and borough solicitor and one for $16,000 for borough treasurer, by the U. S. Fidelity and Security Company were approved. The $10,000 in bonds in the sinking fund were discussed and it was decided to have them registered.

Fire in the dumps on Allegheny street, north of Curtin street, was reported again and the matter was referred to the sanitary committee, with a suggestion that an attempt be made to extinguish it by use of chemicals and, if that fails, to attempt dynamiting it and then using water or chemicals as might seem best.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

Mangled Bodies of Two Men Found Near Philipsburg.

Two strangers, believed to be James L. Deacon, a World War veteran of Philadelphia, and James Manion, of New York, were killed on Monday night on the Pennsylvania railroad near the Harbison—Walker Refractories Company plant near Philipsburg.

The bodies, horribly mangled, were discovered Monday night about 10:30, a short time after they had been run over by a northbound freight train, by a man on his way to work at the brick plant. An approaching train was flagged and the bodies taken to the Eboch undertaking establishment.

F. M. Henderson, railroad police at Osceola Mills, viewed the bodies after being notified of the accident and recognized the one as James Manion, of New York City, 49 years old.

The other was identified as James L. Deacon by papers found in his pockets. He was about 29 years old. He had served out two enlistments in the United States army covering the period of the World War and carried two honorable discharges from the service.

New Farm Agent.

J. N. Robinson, having resigned as farm agent in Centre County in order to return to his home farm, in Mercer County, is getting affairs in shape to leave about the 15th. He filled his position well and made many friends who regret to see a good fellow leave but all wish him best of success. His successor will be R. S. Blaney, of Media, Delaware County. Mr. Blaney is now here getting acquainted with the job and Centre County folks.

Is Your Back Giving Out?

ARE you miserable with an aching back? Do you get up lame and stiff—lag through the day, tired, weak and worn out? Do you wonder why you are so run down? Many times this condition is due to weak kidneys. Winter's colds and chills are hard on the kidneys. The kidneys are apt to slow up in their work of filtering body-poisons from the blood. These poisons accumulate. Then comes backache, with rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities.

Don't risk serious kidney trouble! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They are recommended by many grateful people. Ask your neighbor!

Whenever I stooped the pain caught me across my back and it was hard to straighten. My back was stiff and sore. A couple boxes of Doan's Pills drove away the backache and fixed up my kidneys."

Mrs. F. J. Hamilton, 421 Meadow St., Curwensville, Pa., says: "There was a dull, bearing down pain across my kidneys. When I bent over and straightened up I got a stitch in my back. Mornings when I got up the muscles of my back were lame and sore. My kidneys were too frequent in action. Doan's Pills drove away the backache and flushed and regulated my kidneys."

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

O. K.'S MEASURES FOR DISABLED VETERANS

Recommendations of the senate committee investigating affairs of the veterans' bureau reflect practically every recommendation of the fifth annual convention of the American Legion in regard to care of disabled veterans. This is shown by the announcements of the committee, which indicate that on the major points sought by the Legion rehabilitation committee legislative recommendations will be offered to congress for action.

First of the recommendations to coincide with the Legion's views is further decentralization of bureau affairs seen in the plan suggested for establishment of rating boards in every district and subdistrict for the purpose of hearing claimants in person. This has long been a Legion contention.

Another of the Legion's recommendations suggested in the committee report is that disability of service origin, short of permanent disability, be no bar to reinstatement of war risk insurance.

Legion suggestions further included in the report are increase of pay for disabled veterans with children, to widows of veterans with children, and double compensation for women who lost a son and a husband or two sons in service; allowance for housekeepers for totally helpless veterans; retroactive reduction in compensation be forbidden except in case of fraud; increase in burial expenses for indigent veterans; opening of hospitals to veterans of all American campaigns; suspension of compensation payments to guardians of insane veterans who fail to render proper accounting of funds; and that disputed claims on war risk insurance may be taken to the courts for judgment.

Among the most important of the suggestions made which are in line with the Legion policy or rehabilitation, is that if tuberculosis or mental diseases developed within three years after discharge, these shall be presumed to be of service origin, which opens the way to compensation for thousands of veterans; and the Legion further suggests that the hospitals be thrown open to all veterans suffering from mental disease or tuberculosis without demanding proof that such disease was of service origin.

Directions of the Legion's fight for care of the disabled veteran is in charge of the national rehabilitation committee, which maintains a large force in the national capital, with an active service bureau in touch with the central bureau office and liaison officials and committees in every district and subdistrict.

Much Discussion Over National Prize Essay

The essay of Lambert Slominski of Greenbush, Minn., submitted as state winner in the national essay contest of the American Legion, caused a controversy to arise between H. J. Steel, chairman of the department Americanism commission of the American Legion and several critics of the lad's composition.

Slominski, a schoolboy of sixteen, wrote on the Legion's announced subject, "Why America Should Prohibit Immigration for Five Years." His essay was adjudged best in his state and as a consequence was given wide publicity. One of the points made by the boy was that ability of Slavic and Mediterranean subraces to maintain free institutions and democratic government is questionable.

This called forth much criticism, particularly from representatives of those races. One letter from Rev. V. F. Mikolasek of Lankin, N. D., declared that the Czechoslovak race, of which he is a member, maintained free institutions long before America was discovered. This is, of course, very true, according to history.

But Chairman Steel cited the fact that these people have for several generations been under the dominations of despotic monarchs and peoples. They have not been able to continue their institutions of learning, their forms of free government. Steel maintained that the boy's points were well taken in this respect, as admission of such people was not a reflection on the race itself, but on the lords and masters of the citizenry.

In an open letter to Reverend Mikolasek, Steel said: "Anyone who pauses to reflect a moment will agree that the Slav of today or of any period, is and was different in many respects from the New Englanders of Colonial times. But the Slav is not therefore inferior. Moreover it is not yet determined that America will be molded along the lines set forth by our Puritan ancestors. That is one of the things the Legion hopes to have considered and if possible settled in the present discussion."

The fact that such an essay brought forth discussion was the point aimed at in the nation-wide contest in which nearly 300,000 children competed.

PLAN FOR AID OF EX-SERVICE WOMEN

Creation of a body to promote the aid and interest of 52,000 ex-service women of the World war has been authorized as an organization activity of the American Legion Auxiliary. This action was taken at a meeting of the national executive committee of the organization, when its members authorized the establishment of a "president's parley," fostered from the first department presidents of the organization, and including past presidents of the national body, departments and units.

A fund for the relief of these ex-service women will become the principal objective of the parley, which has already settled on April 6 of each year as the day for such a drive. This campaign will be a separate undertaking for each past president in her own community. In case these funds exceed the needs of ex-service women, the money will be devoted to rehabilitation and hospitalization work.

Membership in the original parley, known as the "Aloha Presidents," in honor of Hawaii, the first department chartered, was limited to 53 departmental presidents. In the new body, all past department presidents are eligible to the "national president's parley," this number being automatically increased by expiration of annual terms. In provision for departmental parleys, past department presidents and past presidents of local units will hold membership, an annual meeting at the department convention being required.

The "Aloha Fund," for relief of women who served in the World war, is to be drawn from work by departments and units, one-half going to the department and national parleys, the remainder to be used by the local unit. Handling of the national funds by the Aloha presidents is provided by the constitution of that body.

Creviston Is Chosen New National Adjutant

Russell G. Creviston of Marion, Ind., who for some time has been assistant national adjutant to Col. Lemuel Bolles, recently retired, has been named to succeed Colonel Bolles.

Russell G. Creviston.

Mr. Creviston has played a prominent part in Legion affairs for the past four years, going to the national headquarters from Minneapolis, where he had been doing work among returned soldiers with a war camp community organization.

State-Wide Campaign to Arouse Citizens

The most comprehensive experiment in education in citizenship ever undertaken in the nation is under way in California, under direction of the American Legion. Nearly 2,000 workers, enrolled by the Legion in a state-wide speakers' bureau, are carrying a message of Americanism to every settlement in the state in an effort to offset the apathy of citizens toward civic affairs.

Department Commander James F. Collins organized the movement and is directing instruction of the huge corps of workers from state headquarters, in a cause which will continue until fall.

"The Legion is aroused by the danger which confronts this country because of apathy of her citizens toward civic affairs and the increasing neglect of the privilege of voting," said Commander Collins, "a prime movement of the whole campaign will be to secure a larger registration among eligible voters in the state and to impress upon the citizens their duty to participate in governmental affairs."

The state has been divided into forty districts, with a district commander appointed in each district who is to supervise the work. At least once each month, every American Legion post is to be visited by a Legionnaire from another post, and in addition all the civic clubs as Rotary, Kiwanis, women's clubs, church, luncheon and fraternal clubs will hear a Legion speaker, seeking to arouse the citizenry of its obligation to community, state and nation.

Took Meeting to Bedside

Because two ex-service men were in plaster casts in a hospital at Anchorage, Alaska, members of the American Legion took their meeting to the bedside of the veterans, and there formally adopted them as members. One of the men, Chris Sladoje, was badly injured by a fall of rock while working along the line of the Alaska railroad.

WHEN DAUGHTER DISOBEYED DAD

By MARJORY H. MORROW

(©, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

MINNIE was a small-town girl. She was pretty in a timid, retiring way, but for some reason or other nobody had ever looked at her more than once. Therefore, when Ed Dowling from Boston, gay, debonair, "the glass of fashion and the mold of form," began to drop in of an evening, she was little short of ill with ecstasy.

"Come on out on the river tonight," he said, stopping by the little white gate one noon as he was passing. "I've hired a canoe from Hi Rogers and we can jazz around in the moonlight."

Minnie's heart gave a great jump, but she seemed to see her father's rigid countenance and hear his stern voice as he looked about the dinner table.

"I ab-so-lute-ly forbid any of you children going out upon the river after dark. It is not safe. Under no condition are you to disobey this rule. You will please not forget it." His crisp tones echoed in Minnie's head while she heard Ed say:

"What's the matter, girlie? Don't you want to come? I never get a chance to be with you alone, you know."

Minnie swallowed hard, looked up at him appealingly, and answered:

"I—I'm supposed to go to the Sunday school picnic at Laurel grove tonight."

"Righto! We'll go there and slip away. Come on—dear."

Minnie blushed furiously, and capitulated.

"Attababy!" cried Ed, joyously. "We'll have cushions n'everything. Don't forget."

* * * * * * *

Sleepy frogs croaked in the reeds. A wheeling night hawk sent down his plaintive call. The river was a sheet of silver under the risen moon. Ed and Minnie drifted idly among the gleaming ripples. At times he thrummed a ukulele and sang softly in a low, clear baritone. Minnie was in the seventh heaven.

"Jumping Jupiter!" gasped Ed, suddenly, looking at his watch. "Do you know what time it is? It's 11:30 o'clock!"

Minnie's dream came tumbling about her ears. The frogs seemed now to be croaking a warning: "Go home! Go home!"

"I'll—I'll get in the back way," she faltered. "Oh, dear, let's hurry!"

Haste usually makes waste, and sometimes it makes worse things. This time it made Minnie catch her foot in the gunwale of the canoe and plunge noisily into the dark water! Ed fished her out with more expedition than skill, and held the wet, shivering little body quite close for a minute. He said nothing, but Minnie felt at once thrilled and comforted.

A long trail of water straggled along the silent street to the gate of Minnie's house. There Ed left her, squeezing her hand encouragingly.

"Will be around tomorrow," he whispered into the dark.

Minnie stole up the back stairs quietly enough, but was faced with the problem of what to do with her wet clothes. At last she tiptoed up into the attic and hung them over the rainy-weather lines. As she crept into bed she felt sure that her secret was safe.

"Minnie, dear," said her mother the next morning, "dress quietly and don't make any noise coming down to breakfast. Your father had one of his headaches last night and wishes to sleep late."

After breakfast a whistle shrilled outside, and Minnie hastened out on the porch, bungalow apron and all, to greet her cavalier of the night before. He stood looking up at her, his eyes soft and brooding in the morning light, the elm trees making patterns all over his neat gray suit. Minnie smiled shyly down, a dishtowel clasped in one small hand, and whispered:

"No one heard me come in last night. Everything's all right. I hung my wet clothes in the attic, and—"

"What does this mean?" suddenly demanded a terrible voice from the doorway. Minnie turned and beheld her father in a bathrobe and nightcap, holding in his shaking hands a dilapidated bundle of crushed organdie and lace!

"This morning," began the old man, nearly choking with rage, "this morning I woke and found—and found my ceiling leaking!

"Drops of water were falling on my nose, my face was wet—wet! Dare you laugh, sir? I believe you are to blame for this. What have you done to my daughter? Come here and I'll wring your impudent young neck!"

Then Ed Dowling proved that all the virtues are not country-bred. He stepped quietly up beside Minnie, his face a mixture of profound regret and proud possessiveness, slipped his arm around her waist and said:

"I am very sorry, sir. It is, as you say, entirely my fault. I took your daughter out on the river and unfortunately she fell in. Not wishing to disturb her family, she hung her damp clothes in the attic and also, unfortunately, over your room. I have asked your daughter to be my wife and wish at the earliest opportunity, to consult you on the matter. May I come around this afternoon, sir?"

Minnie gasped in astonishment and joy. Her father grunted, too amazed for the moment to speak!

"Thank you, sir," said Ed respectfully. "At about three o'clock, then. Good-morning."

Alcyone Is Brightest Star of the Pleiades

Alcyone, the brightest star of the Pleiades, equals in brightness the star Zeta, says Nature Magazine. It was at one time fancifully pictured as the center of the universe by the astronomer Maider, but this was merely a speculation for which there is absolutely no foundation. The Pleiades form, in fact, a moving cluster of stars of 200 or more members and the principal stars are associated with a nebula of vast size. There is no reason to believe that our sun with his family of planets is moving around this or any other center of the universe. It has been estimated that the distance of the Pleiades from the solar system is over 800 light years, or, in other words, that the light from this cluster takes over 300 years to travel to the earth. We see these stars today as they were before the Pilgrim fathers landed in America.—Nature Magazine.

An armored motor car, in which an imaginary paymaster and two imaginary assistants were passengers, was peppered with .45-caliber bullets at Otsego and Lorraine streets, Brooklyn, the other afternoon. Several policemen were in the vicinity, but none made a move, for the three bandits who fired at the car were imaginary, too.

The shooting was arranged as a test for an armored motor car designed for use in transporting large sums of money from banks to business houses. The bullets had no effect, even the glass windows being bullet proof.

The car is equipped with two tanks, containing tear gas and sneezinz gas. If bandits should force the chauffeur to stop they would be gassed as they approached the car.

Russia's Steamboat Path to Far East

Amur River Plays Important Part in Development.

Washington.—The Amur region of Siberia, reported to have set up an independent "white" government since the death of the Russian leader, Nikolai Lenin, is the subject of the following bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society:

"The Amur province, which takes its name from the Amur river, one of the great streams of the world," says the bulletin, "furnished an important and adventurous chapter in the great epic of Russia's advance eastward to the Pacific—an advance ranking, in its influence on world history, alongside the push of other Europeans to the Western world.

Furs Were Eastern Magnet.

"The search for more furs was the particular sort of trade that led Russian adventurers into Asia and eventually took the banner of St. Andrew there—a reversal of the popular idea that 'trade follows the flag.' Adventurers began feeling their way into Siberia from the Urals during the century after America was discovered. Pushing their way eastward was not easy in the western half of Siberia because the drainage was all across their route and many broad rivers were encountered. But once past Lake Baikal they soon reached the headwaters of the Amur, and found nature an ally instead of an enemy. For the 1,700 or more miles of the river's length extend predominantly east and west; and once on its current the pioneers found it possible to reach the far distant Pacific in a matter of weeks. The Amur, then, became the great highway for Russian migration in the centuries to follow.

"For a time after the early exploration of the Amur, a treaty with China and wars in Europe brought Russian activity in far eastern Siberia to a standstill; but from about the middle of the Nineteenth century onward development was rapid, and in that development the Amur river long played a role like that of our Mississippi in the development of our 'first West.' Large, well-appointed steamboats were placed in service on the stream, and travelers could go in comfort for half the year where a short while before only the crudest facilities were available. Little settlements and a few important towns sprang up on the Russian side of the river, largely in the Amur province of which the stream marks the southern boundary for some 750 miles.

"Across the Amur to the south lies China, or rather Manchuria, which, before the World war, was being rapidly Russianized. Still, the river there is truly an international line, and this was proved, if by nothing else, by the extensive smuggling that went on across it.

"The Amur province is in the same latitude as Newfoundland and has a climate that in some ways is comparable to the climate of that far northern American land. The winters are severe, the temperature sometimes falling to 40 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. The summers, however, are hot and at times the thermometer climbs to above the 100 mark. The country has extensive forest-covered hills which extend in many places down to the Amur. Other parts of the river's banks, however, are plains originally covered with thickets which have now been cleared away. The soil has proved rich and well adapted to grain growing and to sustaining a verdant growth of grass.

Railway Valuable Asset.

"When the Siberian railway was pushed through at the end of the Nineteenth century and the gigantic 'cut-off' was made through Manchuria, it set things back on the Amur for a while. But after the Russo-Japanese war, Russia's hold on Manchuria was weakened and the empire began building the western half of the great railroad just north of the Amur where it would be entirely on Muscovite territory. Tremendous hardships were encountered in traversing bogs and forests and crossing great rivers; but the job was about completed when the World war broke out. This long stretch of railway paralleling the Amur from 50 to 75 miles north of it, is one of the most valuable assets of any government that may be set up in the Amur region.

"Blagoveshscensk, on the Middle Amur, and connected with the Amur railway by a branch line, is the metropolis of the province, a town of about 45,000 inhabitants. Spread out along the river bank, with its spires and domes showing against the skyline, it makes an imposing appearance to the traveler on the river, especially since it contrasts so noticeably with the little river towns. Across the river is a Chinese town known locally as Sakalin, but appearing under numerous aliases on the maps. Many of Sakalin's inhabitants, too, have their aliases, for it is a haven for smugglers.

"The Amur province is some 650 miles long, and its greatest width is 340 miles. Its 154,000 square miles of area give it a size close to that of California."

Wife Leaves Radio Fan; Judge Says She's Right

Bridgeport, Conn.—Because he cared more for his radio set than for her was the reason given in Superior court by Mrs. Harold K. Andrews for leaving her husband.

Andrews asked Judge Isaac Wolfe for a habeas corpus to obtain possession of his two children, whom the mother took with her when she left last August. He accused his wife of leaving him alone nights to seek pleasure.

Judge Wolfe, in refusing the habeas corpus writ, said:

"The husband was wrapped up in his radio set. A husband should remember he owes duties to his wife. Mrs. Andrews naturally had to seek pleasures elsewhere."

Indian Tribe Names Given by Palefaces

Many Have Fancy Appelations "Wished on" Them.

Boston.—A large proportion of the Indian tribes of the American Southwest accept names that have been given them by others. Their tribal names frequently appear to have little or no meaning. For instance, the Navajo and the true Apache, to an extent blood brothers, know themselves as "Dine" or "Tinneh," for which the tribal translation, usually given with a detached air of immateriality is merely "people." The same is true of the Pima designation of themselves. They are the "A-a-tahm," the true Pima being the "A-a-tahm Akimalt," or River People, for they dwell mainly along the Gila and the Salt, while their near relatives, the Papago, are the "Aa-a-tam To-o-no," or Desert People, says the Christian Science Monitor.

The Pima (Pee-mah) probably were so named by the first Spaniard to meet this friendly and industrious agricultural people. Without doubt the Spaniard, thrusting out a finger, inquired, "Who are you?" the answer coming, in simplest form, "I don't understand you," or "Pimah-che." And Pima they ever after have been, accepting the name without question. Their relatives were known to the Spaniard as the "Pimas Frijoleros," or "Papa-go." Lumholtz and Hodge call them "Papa-o-o-tam," or "Bean People."

The Butterflies.

Near the Pima are the Maricops, a Yuman tribe, probably named by the same early Spaniard, who, when he saw approaching a number of Indians, gorgeously painted in yellow and black, admiringly exclaimed, "Indios Mariposas," or "Butterfly Indians." The name accepted appears to be the Indian rendition of "Mariposa."

It is much the same with the great tribe at the mouth of the Gila. When the Spaniard came and asked his question it may have been understood in a personal sense, a young Indian proudly answering, "Ya-ma-yo," "I am the son of a chief!" The tribal name is Cuchan, which appears to appertain to the Colorado river.

The Mohave, greatest of the Yumans, Indians of Shoshoean linguistic classification, have a more definite naming, from the Needles, three sharp peaks that rise beside the Colorado on the east, known to the river people as "Ha-muk-abi," the "Three Mountains." The first two syllables are Yuman for "three." Of the same stock and near neighbors are the rather degenerate Hualpai, or Wallapai, whose name has to do with the pine tree. Also of Yuman stock is the Indian remnant in the bottom of the marvelous gorge of Cataract canyon, the Havasu-pai, "People of the Blue Water." The water indeed is blue, as it rises near their village in giant springs and then plunges over beautiful falls and cataracts for miles till it reaches the murky Colorado.

Till of late years the house dwellers on the mesas of Tusayan have been known as "Moqui," an opprobrious designation by neighboring tribes, its meaning "filthy" or "decayed." With deference to the degree of objection felt by the Indians, the name now applied is "Hopi," from the tribal designation of "Hopitu," meaning "Peaceful People."

A Mistaken Derivation.

The Navajo in error have been thought to have been named by the Spaniards as "Knifers," for "nava'jo" in Spanish means "pocket knife." In reality, the word is an Indian one, meaning "Place of Large Plantings." The first Spaniards called them "Apaches de Navajoa."

"Apache" is a Zuni or Pueblo word meaning simply "enemy." There are many Apaches in the Southwest, the true possessors of the name being of plains origin, or Athapascan linguistic stock, its main subdivisions being the White Mountain, Mescalero (mescal eaters), Coyoteros (of the coyote or coyote eaters), Ojos Calientes (warm springs) or Mimbrenos (of the Mimbres river), Chiricahuas and Janos, the last two being rather closely allied and furnishing the worst of the Indian outlaws, such as those which followed Cochis, Nachis, Ju and Geronimo, the Aravaipas, Tontos (a mixed tribe) and others. Imagine any one cheerfully accepting a tribal name of "fool," for that is what "Tonto" means in Spanish.

Some of the outlaw bands of the Yuman people, such as the Mohave Apache and Yuma Apache, were not real Apaches, though fully as destructive, and usually were ready to fight the real "Dine."

Pet Dog's Tail Food for Starving Couple

Thermopolis, Wyo.—Their pet dog's tail was all that stood between Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Simmons, Fido, and starvation when a big snow fall marooned them four months and a half without supplies, on a hunting trip.

The couple arrived home recently, after having been on the trip since September 11. Simmons had whiskers that would have done credit to Santa Claus. The couple went into the Chimney creek district about thirty miles from Meeteese last September. A big snowstorm came up and they found it impossible to get out with their car.

Simmons had almost decided to kill his hunting dog rather than starve to death, according to the story he tells, but the dog looked so pitiful and was as hungry as himself. So he just cut the dog's tail off, made soup of it and threw the bone to the dog, saving the lives of all. The next day they found their way out of the marooned district.

Platinum Substitutes

The great increase in the value of platinum during the last two decades has led many investigators to seek substitutes therefor. It appears that the search has been partly successful. Platinum-clad nickel steel wire in incandescent lamps; wires of nickel alloys are now making the cheaper grades of artificial teeth; asbestos threads are now taking the place of platinum wires in gas mantles, and fused quartz ware has come into general use in chemical laboratories in the place of platinum utensils. Yet the introduction of these substitutes has not affected the price of platinum. The demand for the metal seems steadily to have increased in spite of them.—New York World.

INFORMATION REQUESTED.

Every person who pays electric lighting bills in Bellefonte will be interested in this open letter which is addressed specifically to the Keystone Power Corporation:

What is the real cause for the frightfully inflated electric lighting bills for residences during the past few months?

It is a matter of general complaint that residence lighting has in many instances doubled or tripled in cost. Why?

This newspaper has been informed by sources classed as intelligently posted on electrical matters that there is a particular reason for the remarkable jump in monthly bills. This as we are advised, is that recently the local plant of the Keystone Power Corporation has been connected with other power plants by means of a trunk line system of very high voltage. As explained to us, this greatly augmented power, or pressure, is at times in excess of the capacity of the equipment of the local system. In other words, that a voltage much greater than is necessary for residence lighting is applied, and the meters register accordingly. By the same authority we are told that a remedy is to use globes of lower watt strength; approximately one-half being recommended.

We do not profess to be technically informed regarding such matters. We deem it a duty, however, to submit the question to the Keystone Power Corporation. If the trouble is of a character that can be remedied by co-operation between the lighting company and patrons, such co-operation should be had by all means. And it should not be delayed a day longer than necessary. The temper of patrons at the present time is such that a petition to the Public Service Commission to send experts here to look into the matter is being seriously considered.

ANOTHER OPEN LETTER

"The Republican" last week addressed a kindly letter to the Bellefonte Council urging the widest publicity for all phases of the suggested electric lighting plant project before attempting any final action that would lead to higher taxes. It is gratifying to learn that the matter is being held in abeyance pending further investigation. We would respectfully suggest to the Council that before voting in favor of such an outlay of the people's money that a public meeting be called in the Court House to ascertain what the people think about it. Such a step would seem to us to be only fair to the taxpayers. As we pointed out last week, if the project is sound and for the best interests of Bellefonte, publicity will aid rather than retard it. If not, publicity will kill it. It is morally certain that if any move involving additional debt to the Borough is undertaken without public approval it will be quickly halted by a taxpayer's suit for an injunction.

Forage Crops For Pigs.

Results of various experimental stations, including the animal husbandry at the Penn. State College, indicate that forage fed pigs are thriftier and are produced more economically than those fed in dry lots. Tests conducted on over 2000 hogs on 75 farms in various parts of the state give practical proof. A summary of the tests shows that where 451 pounds of grain were requiaed to produce 100 pounds of gain in dry lots only 315 pounds were needed when the porkers had good forage crops. Authorities estimate that one-third of the grain bill can be saved by the use of a proper grain ration with pasture such as alfalfa, Dwarf Essex rape or clover.

An automobile owned and driven by George Schrack, of Loganton, was crowded off the road at the sharp curve near Flat Rock on Saturday afternoon by another car and it went over the steep embankment for 30 feet, landing against a tree. Mr. Schrack's mother was with him. Neither occupant of the car was injured and the auto was but slightly damaged, being in running condition when hoisted back to the road with block and tackle.

House, who was employed in Bellefonte 35 years ago and left here to locate in Altoona, where he was a well known Pennsy shop foreman, died in the Mountain City on Friday evening from pneumonia. He was a cousin of Col. E. M. House. In politics, the deceased believed just the opposite from his distinguished cousin, however, being an ardent Republican.

Idolized

"It says here: 'One of the idols most revered by any heathen is a figure of a woman, seated, resting her chin in her hands,'" said Mrs. Farr, reading from a book.

"Which proves that they are about the wisest people on earth," suggested her husband.

"How so, Orrin?"

"Well," said Mr. Farr, with emphasis, "because they make a deity of a woman who has sense enough to give her chin a rest."—Pathfinder.

SAFETY FIRST.

"How did the accident happen?"

"He got run over when he stopped to read a 'safety first' sign."

SAFETY AT CROSSINGS

Mrs. C. R. Eckenroth, of Unionville, Writes Splendid Article.

Mrs. C. R Eckenroth, wife of the P. R. R. bridge inspector at Unionville, has written a very splendid article on safety at railroad crossings. The article is taken from the recent publication of "Tyrone Division Special," as follows:

"There would be very few crossing accidents by trains running into cars if each driver would adopt the slogan 'Safety First.' It seems to the writer that the railroads have done the last thing in the way of preventing accidents, as there are plenty of signs at the approach of railroad tracks to warn the drivers of cars. It would pay each driver to slow up to make sure there are no trains approaching.

"Recently the writer saw the closest approach to what would have certainly been a fatal accident she ever wishes to see: A man of the immediate vicinity was driving his car on a road that paralleled the railroad track. He noted the train approaching at a rapid rate of speed; instead of waiting, he speeded up and crossed the railroad tracks and escaped being hit only by a car length.

"Folks nearby were horrified. One woman, said, 'Oh! is he going to cross! If I were a member of his family it would be many days before I would take another ride with him.'

"The sign, Cross Crossings Cautiously, was in full view. Let us go a little slower and adopt the slogan, Safety First. It will pay."

There were also reproduced a very good photo of Abraham Lincoln and of Governor Curtin. The photo of Abraham Lincoln was by courtesy of Robert Bruce, of New York, N. Y. The photo of Governor Curtin and the letters, which were reproduced for the first time, were by courtesy of Mrs. John M. Shugert, of Bellefonte, who is a grand-daughter of Governor Curtin.

Selling Blood for Education.

J. George Broady, 21, is selling his blood at $91 per quart to patients for blood transfusion and is paying his way through Ohio State University with the money. He has sold $500 worth of blood and says he feels better than he ever did in his life. When a blood transfusion was recently used in the Bellefonte hospital in an effort to save the life of a Snow Shoe miner, as our readers may recall, the miner's friend gave of his blood without a cent of pay in his eagerness to help if possible.

One Cause of Leg Weakness.

Hundreds of chicks hatched in Centre County each year are troubled with leg weakness. In some cases this ailment is similar to rickets in the human family Much of this trouble is caused by keeping the birds indoors where they do not get the direct sunlight, is the belief of many poultry-men. Experiments have shown that the ordinary window pain takes the ultra violet rays out of the sunlight. These rays are needed for the normal development of the chick. To prevent this, the chicks should be put out-of-doors as soon as possible.

Good Egg Record.

Frank Whiting, who resides just south of town, has a good egg record this year from his flock of 165 Barred Rock hens. In January the hens laid 447 eggs and in February, 2,259 eggs. They are coming stronger every day, too, as the weather becomes more like spring. On Saturday they laid 106 eggs and on Sunday 108—just 9 dozen. Mr. Whiting has been raising chickens for years and he keeps nothing but the Barred Rocks.

He Left Us Well Provided For

ALL the long weeks he suffered after the accident his hospital expenses were paid and I got $50 a week, every four weeks, in addition because he had that ÆTNA DISABILITY POLICY.

He'd had this policy a number of years. It cost so little we never missed the amount. When he left us, it was costing no more than when he first took it out, and all those years the insurance was increasing rapidly.

Baby and I have several thousand dollars now because of my husband's forethought. I shudder to think of what a frightful struggle life would be had he put it off until too late. The world looks none too kindly upon widowhood.

OVER THE COUNTY

The last Friday in February was one of the most delightful days of the winter season.

W. N. Auman, of Millheim, returning to his home after visiting the cemetery fell and fractured his left arm above the elbow.

Walter Orwig, of Aaronsburg, had the misfortune to have his ankle so seriously injured while at work in the Northumberland railroad yards that he has since been unable to work.

Although John Hoy, of Lemont, and his sister, Mrs. Sallie Ruble, of Centre Hall, reside only a few miles apart, the former had not visited in Centre Hall for fifteen years until last month.

It is said that several parties would build if they could purchase lots on the main street through Centre Hall but that the owners of the lots do not care to sell in some instances and in other cases ask what some say is too much money.

The Loysville Orphans' home of the Lutheran church has sent out a notice not to patronize any boys or others who are selling goods under pretense of aiding the institution. The authorities state that the home never sends out boys or girls to solicit or sell for the benefit of the institution.

Miss Mary G. Foster, of Aaronsburg, recently received from Mrs. James Breon, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, a spray of beautiful orange blossoms which were cut from trees on the Breon property. The Breons moved from Penn's valley to Indiana some years ago and later moved from Indiana to Florida, where they seem to be getting along very well.

The first Builder's Exhibit was held by a number of dealers in the I. O. O. F. hall at State College this week.

Cal Crouse, a well known resident of Rebersburg, who had been ill for some months, recently was obliged to remain in bed.

The Wingards have purchased the interest of their partners, the Steigers, in the lumbering operations being carried on at Potters Mills and are operating on their own account.

While the roads were well blocked with snow drifts, Ralph Shook undertook the job of delivering Uncle Sam's mail matter for the regular rural carrier out of Spring Mills—George Wolf. He got by with it, too, but he had to use two mules hitched to a sled instead of a "Lizzie".

Water fronts recently made lots of trouble for two Penn's valley families. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Stover, of Coburn, the kitchen stove exploded on Sunday morning, the 24th, when a hot fire was kindled (it being one of the cold mornings of winter) and the water front was frozen. While it was fortunate that none of the family was injured, pieces of the stove were hurled through the windows of the kitchen and were found in the yard, 25 feet from the house. The next morning, W. J. McMullin, of Millheim, started his fires. His family was visiting and he went to work in the mill. When he returned to his home, he found the kitchen flooded. Nobody heard an explosion but McMullin's friends think there was one when he saw his kitchen flooded, his stove in pieces.

The obituary notice of Mrs. Susan Mooney will be found in another column in this issue.

The Leap year social held at the home of Clair Harm on Friday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of Snow Shoe, was an event long to be remembered in the annals of the L. A. S. history as the number in attendance has not often been surpassed and the silver offering was most generous. There were 65 persons present, which goes to show that the good folks of Snow Shoe are wide awake to the best interests of the church while the social side is being promoted.

The Ladies auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church will hold their regular business meeting at the home of Mrs. N. Swartz on Thursday evening, March 6th. All members are invited to be present.

The social held at the home of Mrs. Lena Etters on last Friday evening was a pleasing event. The offering amounted to $8. Those present were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Lohr, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Watson, Mrs. George Harnish, Mrs. Dale Swartz, Mrs. William Crispen, Mrs. Ellery Lucas, Mrs. James Wagner, Mrs. Ella McLaughlin, Mrs. C. F. Swartz, Mrs. Valera Jones Bateman, Mrs. W. Osewalt, Mrs. Harry Osewalt, Misses Elsie and Velda Etters and Walter Healey.

Moore—McCloskey—Miss Thelma Moore, daughter of Daniel Moore, of Clarence, and Blair McCloskey, of Snow Shoe, were happily wedded on Saturday evening, March 1st. The ceremony, which was attended by only the immediate friends of the parties and their parents, was performed by Rev. Stevens, pastor of the M. E. Church, at the home of Harvey Harm in Snow Shoe. Congratulations extended!

Mr. and Mrs. John Confer, Sr., accompanied by their son Wilbur, and wife, motored to Clearfield on Sunday.

H. J. O'Brien made a hasty business trip to New York the latter part of the week.

James Uzzel, Jr., and sister, Miss Margaret, spent the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Uzzle. They entertained two of their school chums who accompanied them home on this brief but pleasant visit.

The ladies of the auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church are planning on serving another supper on the 15th inst. We have not learned what the menu will consist of but rest assured it will be both plenteous and palatable.

On next Sabbath, Rev. J. Stevens will deliver his last sermon before he leaves for conference. Many of his friends will be very sorry if he is removed to another pastorate as both he and his wife hold a warm place in the hearts of Snow Shoe people.

The marriage of one of our Clarence couples, Guy Carver, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Carver, and Miss Margaret L. Beam, was solemnized in the Presbyterian Church at Snow Shoe. Dr. Miller, district superintendent of Philipsburg, performed the ceremony. We join their many friends in congratulations and very best wishes for a happy future.

Judging from the amount of delicious fudge, sea foam and taffy regularly mailed by one of our sweet little girls to a student in Philadelphia, the young man is evidently trying to get what consolation he can from that source. Me thinks he would far rather receive the "Original package."

Mrs. C. H. Watson, who has been quite ill, is able to be about again.

Ralph Etters is carrying his arm in a sling as a result of a hard kick handed him by "Lizzie Ford."

The brick row has had a welcome addition in the family of Carl Dean, former miner, making 22 residents.

It is rumored we are soon to lose two of our most desirable neighbors—the families of James Wagner and Dale Swartz—who are leaving Clarence on account of scarcity of employment here.

Hublersburg.

Mrs. Walter Weaver and daughter Grace, were Lock Haven shoppers last Saturday.

Hogan Markle, who is employed at Altoona, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Markle.

Miss Helen Ishler, R. N. of Linden Hall, visited Mrs. Amelia Swartz one day last week.

Mrs. Ida Dunkle, of Mingoville, visited her father at Miss Rockey's home on Monday.

Mrs. Amelia Lockard, who was staying with her grandson in Williamsport, is spending some time with Mrs. Amelia Swartz

J. M. SHUGERT DEAD

Passed Away Monday Following Prolonged Illness.

J. M. Shugert, one of Bellefonte's most widely known residents, passed away at his home on East Linn street about 9 o'clock on Monday morning from heart trouble following a prolonged illness.

The deceased had been seriously ill for about two years. During his lifetime he followed banking and was president of the Centre County Banking Company when he became ill. The failure of the bank and other business complications caused him to suffer a complete physical collapse. He felt very keenly the failing of an institution in which he had been so long associated and in which so many of his closest friends were financially interested.

Born in Bellefonte, deceased was a son of the late J. Dunlop and Mary Shugert, and was 53 years old last November 10th. His parents were pioneer settlers in Bellefonte and his father was associated with the late Frank McCoy, in the iron works, and in other business activities. Mr. Shugert married Miss Kate Harris, who survives with two children, George and Mary, at home, and two sisters, Miss Kate D. Shugert, of Bellefonte and Mrs. David J. Kelly, of near Morgantown, W. Va. A brother, Frank Shugert, preceded him in death. Deceased was a member of St. John's Episcopal church, also of the Masons, Elks and Nittany Country Club. Funeral services were held on Wednesday morning and burial made in the family plot in the Union cemetery.

Edgar S. Furst Dead.

Edgar S. Furst, Jr., a son of Edgar S. and Mrs. Julia Pearson Furst, of Cedar Springs, died in a Pittsburgh hospital on Sunday night after an illness from pneumonia of one week. The young man was employed in a steel plant at Pittsburgh. He was 19 years old and is survived by his parents, three brothers and two sisters. Burial was made at Cedar Springs cemetery.

George B. Shaffer Dead.

George B. Shaffer, of State College, died suddenly on Wednesday, Feb. 27th, from heart trouble. He was 61 years old. Surviving are his widow and two sons. Burial was made at Pine Hall on Saturday.

George Clark Dead.

George Clark died at the home of his sisters on Penn street on Tuesday afternoon from heart failure and dropsy. He died on his 48th birthday having been born in Bellefonte on March 4, 1876, a son of James B. and Marea Louise Clark, both deceased. He was a graduate of the Bellefonte Academy and St. Francis College, Loretto, ranking high in his studies. After graduating, he followed insurance work, starting as an agent and working in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and California. He succeeded well and was rapidly promoted from one good position to another and, when he became seriously ill, he was superintendent of the Southern Prudential Insurance Co. in Chicago, Ill. He had a splendid memory and worked hard, which accounted much in his attainment of success. One of the things he treasured was a beautiful silver cup awarded him at a meeting of insurance men in Johnstown, about ten years ago, at which he was one of the principal speakers. He came to Bellefonte about six months ago and during that time his sisters here devoted themselves to his care so that he did not want for loving kindness. In his passing away, they realize keenly their loss of a good brother and a splendid man of the highest type. It seemed for a time that he was becoming better and plans were made to take him to the farm of his brother, near Filmore, this summer where it was thought he would rest and regain his strength among the promising orchards which Dr. Clark has established. An all-wise Providence, however, claimed for his own one whose work had been highly commended. Surviving are the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. J. C. Lambert, Reisterstown, Md.; T. J., Baltimore, Md.; Sister M. Winifred, Convent of I. H. M., Philadelphia; Dr. J. W. Clark, Johnstown; Marea Louise, S. Agnes, and Anastasia Mary, of Bellefonte. One brother, Geo. A. preceded him in death. Funeral services will be held in St. John's Catholic church on Saturday morning by Rev. William Downes and interment made in the Catholic cemetery.

Mrs. Martha Jane Marshall Dead.

The body of Mrs. Martha Jane Marshall, a former resident of Bellefonte, was brought here on Monday afternoon from Buffalo, N. Y., and the funeral procession was from the train and burial in Union cemetery. Mrs. Marshall died on Saturday, March 1, 1924, in a hospital in Buffalo, N. Y., from pleuro pneumonia after an illness of two months. She was born in Buffalo Run valley, a daughter of Jesse and Polly Klinger, both deceased, on July 5, 1843. She married George L. Marshall, who was in his lifetime employed as a clerk in local stores and who managed the grocery of Mrs. Louise Bush in the room on High street where the W. H. Brouse grocery is conducted. She and her husband were an estimable couple who had a host of friends in this vicinity. Mr. Marshall died in 1898 and Mrs. Marshall then made her home with their only son, George, of Buffalo. When the son died about two years ago and his body was brought here for burial, Mrs. Marshall continued to remain at his home in Buffalo with her grandchildren. Her body was accompanied to Bellefonte by her grandson, George Marshall. She was a member of the Reformed church and took an active part in its services. Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Lucy A. Cox and Mrs. W. H. Derstine, of Bellefonte, out of a family of ten children.

Mrs. Susanne Mooney Dead.

Mrs. Susanne Mooney, aged 72 years, died at her home in Houtzdale, on Saturday evening, March 1st, after an illness of several months duration. Mrs. Mooney, whose maiden name was Susanne McKinney, was born near Snow Shoe, and will probably be remembered by some of the older residents as a woman of sterling Christian character, being a consistent member of the M. E. church for many years. The following children are left to mourn the loss of a devoted mother, her husband having preceded her to the grave 3 years ago: Mrs. Robert Cambridge, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Earl Thorn, Clearfield; Mrs. Thomas Henderson and Mrs. Wm. Lewis, of Houtzdale. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor of the M. E. church at the home on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Interment in Brisbin cemetery.

He first husband was Lake Pownell, and from this union there survives one son, Harry Pownell, of Snydertown. She is also survived by her second husband, who was Samuel Pfoutz; one daughter, Mrs. Wilmer Hoover, of Sandy Ridge; one brother, George E. Parker, of Philipsburg; and three sisters; Mrs. Charles Campbell, of State College; Mrs. Josiah Evans and Mrs. Hamer Sankey, of Philipsburg. Funeral services were held on Tuesday and burial made at Philipsburg.

George Ulrich Dead.

George H. Ulrich died at his home in Millheim on Saturday from infirmities. He was 85 years old and a veteran of the Civil War. His wife died five years ago. Surviving are seven children, two brothers and two sisters. Burial was made at Millheim on Tuesday.

Mrs. Clarissa Bell Sent and her granddaughter, Patricia Jane Flannigan, of Williamsport, were buried together in one coffin in the Curtin cemetery on Tuesday afternoon. The babe rested in its grandmother's arms. Mrs. Sent died on Friday and a few hours after the babe died from pneumonia. The grandmother was 63 years old and the babe 8 months. Budinger, of Snow Shoe; Mrs. George Laughner and Mrs. Witherite, address not known; Mrs. A. P. Lucas, Ohio; and Mrs. D. B. Lucas, Clearfield.

Invention of Stamps

Adhesive postage stamps were invented by James Chalmers of Dundee in 1834. After the passage of the uniform penny postage bill by the English parliament in 1840, envelopes bearing an impressed stamp, or mark, for postage were introduced at the suggestion of Rowland Hill, but failed to find favor with the public. The adhesive postage stamp of Chalmers was thereupon substituted and did much to insure the success of the penny postage scheme. Postage stamps were introduced into America in 1847.

Hound Ex-Thief Going Straight

Prey of Crooks Who Know He Dare Not Refuse Demands.

Philadelphia.—The owner of the great drug store was on the point of bankruptcy. There had been a time when he had considered himself a good business man, capable of holding his own with the best. In the last year, however, something, he knew not what, had come over his capabilities. Something was wrong. He was not making any money; indeed, he was slowly slipping backward. And yet his methods of business had not changed from those employed during his money-making years.

The problem was inexplicable. In his more pessimistic moments the drug-store owner vowed that the finger of God was raised against him.

Then one day suspicion sped like an arrow into his breast. The drug clerk! He noted that he had not rung up the full amount of a sale. A few days later a new employee—a detective—was installed in the store.

What amazing truths were revealed! A man would come into the store—one of a notorious neighborhood gang—and buy $10 worth of stuff, or maybe $20 worth. He would lay a dollar down upon the counter and say:

"Charge it!"

"But we sell only for cash," the clerk would reply.

"Yer a fine one to tell me what ter do. A crook like yerself," replied the man grandiliquently.

An ashen pallor would mount to the face of the clerk. He did not dare say another word. With his nervous eyes glued upon the retreating form of the customer he would ring up the dollar in the register. The crooks and thieves of the underworld had learned that the drug clerk had once been crooked and that he was stealing from his employer, says the Philadelphia Record. What an opportunity for blackmail!

A Well-Recognized Evil.

Such are the way of the "vultures," a well-recognized and ever-present class of crooks, according to Edward H. Bryant, detective. Sometimes they watch an employee whom they think dishonest until they catch him in the act of stealing. At other times they know the past of the clerk and threaten exposure and consequent ruin. Perchance the clerk has reformed and would return to the paths of righteousness, but the black and menacing past holds him rooted in his tracks. Imagine the fate of a shop or store when the vultures lay hold of it!

Sometimes this brand of crook works with a greater guile and cunning. Frequently he is a person of some position who, while maintaining an appearance of responsibility and usefulness, is a thief.

Consider the story of a large Philadelphia electrical wholesaler, an employee and an electrical contractor.

Mr. Mazda did considerable business and bought all of his supplies from the large firm of Wire, Socket & Dowling, electrical wholesalers. For a time he was content to go along like any contractor, buying his goods, executing his jobs, taking a fair share of profit along with the others. But he wanted to outbid his competitors. He wanted to make more money.

In the course of his business relationship with the electrical wholesalers Mr. Mazda had come to know almost every one in the whole establishment, from the president down to the old man who swept up around the place. Mr. Mazda was very liberal with his gifts. He knew how to purchase good will and favor by dispensing cigars and other small tips. Every one knew him as a good fellow.

One man in the shipping room especially basked in the electrical contractor's beams of favor. One time he had dropped all other things to get out a rush order for Mr. Mazda and had received a $5 tip in recognition of the favor. At other times he had done other small things for money—in short, he could be bought. Jarvis was one of those fellows who wavered upon the borderline between honesty and crookedness.

A Free Show.

One day Mr. Mazda sailed into the shipping room and after greeting the entire force got Jarvis off to one side.

"My wife's sick," he confided. "I've bought a couple of tickets for a show tonight. How would you like to have one of them? Just a little favor, you know; you've done lots of things for me," explained the contractor.

Needless to say, Jarvis accepted the favor. That night found the two men in contiguous seats. During the intermission and following the show Mazda tempted Jarvis.

"You're not making as much money as you ought to—doing the work you do for $35. Why don't you make a little extra dough? I tell you what you do: Let me have some stuff and we'll fix up the thing between us! Nothing easier; they don't know how much stuff they have around that place. Their inventories are a joke."

Jarvis did not accede to the plan at once, but he was too weak-willed to resist long. A few days later one of Mazda's trucks drove away from the electrical appliance wholesalers. Upon it was $800 worth of stuff, for which he had given up but 400 iron men, and the iron men didn't go to the wholesalers, either. Jarvis got them.

And so things went on. Mazda's trucks bore away stuff every few days. In six months $8,000 worth of goods had been stolen. Then the detectives descended upon the crooks and their game was up. Jarvis, once he had allowed the first $800 worth of stuff to leave the place of the wholesalers, was completely in Mazda's hands. Mazda needed only to make threats to have his puppet jump as he willed. In a short time Jarvis was getting only ten cents on each dollar's worth of stuff removed. He could not squeal, he could not even give up his job, as he so often threatened, for Mazda threatened exposure if he did so. He had sold himself body and soul to Mazda.

Eight thousand dollars' worth of stuff cannot be removed even from the largest establishment without causing suspicion and Jarvis and Mazda received their rewards.

Employ Corrupt Customer.

This was a case of a customer who corrupted an employee, but here is a true story of an employee who corrupted half a score of customers:

In the shipping room of a great automobile accessory establishment selling at wholesale to garage owners and supply stores, one Nolan held forth. He was an old employee and did pretty much as he pleased. Now, you can't always tell an honest man from a crook and Nolan, though no one suspected it, was an old fox.

Whenever a shipment was made up Nolan would include therein a few extra articles. If the customer was honest and wanted to return the stuff Nolan would say: "Never mind, just keep it and say nothing about it." Those who would take the extra articles and say nothing about them were tried further.

In this fashion Nolan drummed up about ten private customers of his own, who bought goods as low as ten cents on the dollar. In the end the company began missing stuff and detectives brought retribution upon the crooks. The customers were forced to make good to the extent of $7,500.

There have been a number of incidents within recent years of employees being planted in establishments by gangs of crooks. A very interesting case of this kind took place in a large textile manufacturing plant. The inventories began to show hundreds of dollars' worth of missing stuff. For months the detectives worked upon the mystery without getting the slightest clue that might lead to a solution. The stuff was not getting away via the shipping department, nor was it being taken out piecemeal by the employees. The detectives were unanimous upon this point. How, then, was it disappearing?

One day one of the sleuths working in the plant under the guise of an operator of a machine saw a bundle being thrown from a window. Some one on the street picked it up and disappeared down the street.

Subsequent developments showed that the man responsible for the articles stolen had a long criminal record, and that the gang with whom he was working had gotten away with thousands of dollars' worth of stuff from various establishments. The man was a very willing worker and took especial pains to ingratiate himself into the favor of the boss. He didn't let the whistle interfere with the completion of a job, neither did he watch the clock. The establishment thought they had a jewel of a workman until they found out differently.

This Is a Funny One.

Mr. Bryant declares that in all his years of experience with dishonest employees nothing ever so nearly developed into an opera bouffe as a case featuring the disappearance of bars of soap from a factory.

For weeks the loss of property was reported to the head of the concern. He employed every means at his command to fathom the mystery of the disappearing soap, but without avail. Then he turned the matter over to detectives. Men were placed in the shipping room, but they could find nothing wrong. All the soap delivered there was done up in cartons and was sealed and wrapped according to Hoyle. Then they turned their attention more closely to the other employees to learn whether they were carrying off the stuff in their dinner pails or by other means. Again there was nothing doing.

The detectives were at a complete impasse. They were beaten. Then one day an accident completely cleared up the mystery. It was dinner hour, and one of the detectives happened to be passing through the drying room. Suddenly he heard a tremendous racket in the yard beneath. Two women had come out to the rear of their dwellings and were staging a fierce battle. They seemed to be batting each other upon the heads with brooms, but, contrary to the rules of logic and common sense, neither of them fell unconscious to the ground. At closer inspection the detective was able to see that the women were merely shamming.

At the first sound of battle the employees of the soap factory had rushed to the windows. They enjoyed the thing with great glee, good humoredly shying bars of soap down on the heads of the combatants. By the time the women were exhausted and retreated to their houses 30 or 40 bars of soap were lying upon the ground.

The detective watched to see what would happen next in the yard below. When the one o'clock whistle blew and the soap people had resumed work, the women came out with baskets and garnered in the swag. A few hours later the detective saw the two women sitting together upon their doorstep chatting amicably.

Quarrel Was Make-Believe.

The next day the detective led the owner of the plant to a window overlooking the yards of houses near by. Promptly at twelve o'clock the women rushed from their houses and began the spectacle of batting each other with brooms. And again the soap began to fly. Some months before the women actually had had a fight, and the profits from the soap thrown at them had been so large that they had decided to stage a combat every now and then for the profit of it.

A good detective brings creative thought and imagination to his work. Each case presents a new problem that must be solved in its own especial way.

Stamps for Stolen Seeds

Kansas City.—Some one's guilty conscience got the better of him, and S. Bryson Ayres, florist, received an anonymous letter with ten 2-cent stamps inclosed. The writer stated he had "helped himself to a half teaspoonful of seeds from Ayres' floral gardens at the edge of the field on Blue Ridge road." The stamps were in payment for the seeds.

Local Man Commended.

Roy H. Grove, solicitor for the Bell Telephone Company in Centre County, working from the Bellefonte office, this week received from L. J. Billingsley, Division Manager of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, at Harrisburg, a letter of commendation that is most pleasing to Mr. Grove. The latter, in his duties discovered that some person was using long distance service and putting worthless slugs in the pay station telephones, instead of real coin. With the co-operation of the exchange operators, the stranger was caught by Mr. Grove who said, "The operator told me that he was at a certain pay station. I went and caught him in the act of putting the slugs in the coin slots. He admitted that he had been making a practice of calling a girl in New York state and using slugs to pay for the message. He is employed as a salesman and may have practiced the game in other places. He is, I understand, the son of wealthy parents. When caught, he was anxious to settle and not have his name mentioned. He made good for all the calls from here and agreed to make good on any calls put in elsewhere if slugs were used and found."
